

Proud to be a Muslim

Assalamu-alaykum,

All my friends at school are wearing chains. This was the latest craze. They were walking around pushing the little kids about.

They told me I had to get some chains as well so that I could join their cool gang.

When I got home I asked my mum if I could get some money to buy something from the shop.

When my mum gave me money, I rushed to town to buy a super-cool chain. Soon I would be part of the gang.

I was looking at the chains when the lady behind the counter asked "Is it for you?"

When I said yeah, She said, "I thought for a second you were a Muslim."

I felt embarrassed and realised I had made a mistake. I am proud to be a Muslim so I should look and act like one as well!

